Aged Cameron Mills Man Buried Saturday

Cameron Mills — John H. Richtmyer, age 92, well known local man died at the home of his daughter here last Wednesday afternoon. Death came after several month of por helth, he having been confined to his bed for about four weeks.

Mr. Richtmyer was born in Tompkins County, January 4, 1841. He removed to Cameron Mills in 1878, locating on the farm now owned by J. R. McCaig. Later he resided in the village for ten years and afterwards moved to a farm a mile west if the village where he lived until about 1924.

He married Azalia Nile, who died nine years ago. To them were born four children now surviving. They were Elrey of Cameron Mills, Arthur of Campbell, Mrs. Hanry Thompson of Hornell and Mrs. James Crawford with whom he resided. The funeral was held at the Cameron Mills Methodist Church at two o'clock Saturday afternoon. The Rev. Russell Crane officiated. Burial was made in Town Line-Cemetery.

RATHBONE GRANGE

The annual meeting of Rathbone Grange will be held Saturday, December 9. A picnic dinner will be served at noon followed by the regular meeting and election of officers. A good attendance is anticipated.

Mr. and Mrs. Asa Smith were recent callers at the home of Mr. Smith's uncle, A. Kenyon in Elkland.

"Gold Diggers" Said To Be Even Greater Than 42nd Street

"Gold Diggers of 1933," Warner Bros.' all-star, dramatic musical spectacle, said to be even greater than "42nd Street," as the most lavish entertainment of the decade, opens Sunday matinee at the Star Theatre.

A fitting sequel to the sensationally popular picture "42nd Street" which started new styles in screen fare, "Gold Diggers of 1933" according to Hollywood information excels its great predecessor in beauty, in catchy tunes and "whistling" music, in comedy and in its story values. Its list of stars is even more imposing; the chorus ensembles, directed by Busby Berkeley, are more spectacular; its songs by Harry Warren and Al Dubin, will appeal to even wider audiences.

The names of Warren William, Joan Blondell, Ruby Keeler (Mrs. Al Jolson) who sprang to screen fame over night in "42nd Street;" Dick Powell, Aline MacMahon, Guy Kibbee, Ginger Rogers and Ned Sparks head the superlative cast ensembled by Warner Bros. for "Gold Diggers of 1933." Mervyn LeRoy who directed "I Am a Fugitive From a Chain Gang" and "Elmer the Great," directed from the Avery Hopewood story adapted by Erwin Gelsey and James Seymour.

"Gold Diggers of 1933" is a "back of the back-stage" story, a dramatic and amusing insight into the lives and loves of the people primarily responsible for the staging of a great New York show. It is an intensely human story climaxed by a triumphant and spectular "show" in which Busby Berkley's choruses of 200 picked beauties are lavishly displayed in dance ensembles unequaled in the history of stage or screen.

It is, furthermore, the story of three gold digging show girls into whose capable hands the problem of finding an "angel" for the show that will give them employment and opportunity, is entrusted. The tricks and trades behind many a Broadway success, are disclosed in a whirlwind of exciting incidents and amusing situations. The song writing scion of a proud family eventually involves both his severely proper older brother and the family laywer in the intricacies of showmanship. All in all, it is a dramatically sound comedy drama enhanced by the generous production values of the "big show."

The chorus featured throughout, is a collection of beauty gathered from the whole nation and trained under the guiding genius of the man responsible for the chorus ensembles already famous in "The Kid From Spain" and "42nd Street" as well as in numerous New York stage revues in recent years. The numbers orginated for "Gold Diggers of 1933" mark the high spot in Hollywood's donations to the World's entertainment. Nothing like them in beauty, spectacle and daring has been seen before.

GRIST—JORDAN

Miss Isabelle Jordan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Jordan, and Myron Grist, both of this place, were united in marriage at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jordan Saturday evening, December 2. The ceremony was performed by George Potter, justice of peace of Canisteo, in the presence of relatives and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Menzo Husted were Thanksgiving Day guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Brown in Addison.

Annual Meeting of Steuben County Farm Bureau Draws 300

With the largest annual meeting in its history, the farm bureau Saturday began another year of service to farmers of Steuben County. Some 300 of the membership representing every community of the county crowded into the big dining room of the Masonic Temple to hear reports of officers, elect directors and listen to the address of State President White.

Walter Babcock of Prattsburg, Murray Barnes of Avoca and Lester York of Greenwood were re-elected to the Board of Directors. Others nominated for this service were Virl Bollen, Troupsburg; Claude Rumsey, Cameron; and William Brown, Arkport.

The meeting marked the conclusion of the annual membership canvass and 70 out of a total of 145 committeemen reported in about 500 members. Indications are that the canvass when completed will re-

Hi-Lights and Shadows of the Week's News

Col. and Mrs. Charles Lindbergh landed in Natal, Brazil yesterday after a flight from Bathurst, Africa 2,000 miles across the Atlantic. A huge crowd of Brazilians was on hand to welcome them. The flight took 15 hours and 55 minutes as the flying couple held their plane to an easy pace across the quiet ocean, the first crossing of which brought Lindbergh to fame. While her husband handled the controls, Anne ran the radio equipment.

The sixth Congressional District of Louisiana was stirred in revolt against its kingfish, Sen. Long, this week. The Long machine refused to hold a primary election to select candidates for Congressman to fill the un-expired term of the late Boliver Kemp, who died in the office. Instead an election was hurriedly called for, the ballots being printed with no other name than the wife of the deceased representative, for the ofiice.. Many batches of these ballots were burned by the incensed electorate of the district. Mrs. Kemp received less than 5,000 votes out of a registration of nearly ten times that figure. During the day Long's effigy clad in green trousers, was soaked with gasoline and burned on the gallows. The effigy bore a placard, "In effigy now, in person next."

TWO WRONGS, MAKE NO RIGHT

Out in California last week a mob of some 6,000 people gathered around the San Jose jail, broke through a barrage of tear gas to batter down the door and drag forth to their lynching the two confessed kidnaper murderers of young Brook Harte. Then Governor Rolph of the state of California, issued a statement exonerating the mob and ridiculing the idea of punishing those who did the lynching.

If two wrongs make a right, then perhaps the governor of California might be condoned for his stand in this matter. But two wrongs never did make a right, and the action of Governor Rolph must have been a direct violation of his oath of office. Even though Governor Rolph might desire swift, sure justice be dealt the two murderers, as would most people, the head of a great state should make a stand for law and order instead of showing his sympathies for mob rule.

Yet the California affair is regarded by many people as having a greater significance than the heated action of a blood-thristy mob, and the duty evading policy of the Governor. Actually the San Jose lynching is a public stroke against the dilatory tactics of American courts of justice. Had Californians been sure that the self-confessed kidnapers-murderers would be accorded a swift trial and a sudden death penalty, it is highly improbable the people would have arisen to take the matter into their own hands. The trouble was, they did not know these men would be actually punished. They were not sure that American courts would return a capital verdict and condemn the scoundrels to the fate most people think they deserved. Too many times have clever criminal lawyers taken advantage of every loop-hole and subterfuge in our laws, to bring forth scot free a criminal whom the public believed and the preponderance of evidence showed was guilty.

The San Jose affair was a real indictment of dilatory criminal procedure in this country. People all over the land are sick and tired of the perversion of justice so common in our criminal courts. There are too many criminal lawyers practicing, whose offense does not consist so much in freeing a man arrested for a crime, as in conniving with criminals in their crime commissions.

The American bar is actually up for trial before the great tribunal of the people. It is true that the great majority of lawyers are as abhorrent as the average citizen at the poor ethics displayed by that minority, yet that majority is in a measure to blame for not putting a curb on their unscrupulous brothers. In the last analysis it is the lawyers of the country who frame most of our laws, and upon their shoulders must rest a proportion of the responsibility for the condition which exists today. They are the ones who can most readily apply a remedy to this disease, by working through the bar associations and the law-making channels to correct these corrupt practices, and seeing criminal trials do not drag out immeasurably.

If the lawyers of the country are not willing to shoulder the responsibility, one can shudder to think of what is liable to happen. The affair at San Jose may become the common thing if the temper of the people becomes thoroughly aroused in this matter.

We as Americans should blush to consider what this land might turn to, if the people in most cases decide to take the law in their own hands and publicly punish most violent criminals. For then the innocent would be hung with the guilty and a moderate people could quickly turn to a pack of cut-throats ready to slash and draw blood on the slightest provocation.

No. Governor Rolph was setting a dangerous precedent by condoning the San Jose affair, and level-minded people should turn their thoughts to American courts as the place where wrongs must be righted.

THE FLY IN THE OINTMENT

The development of an American merchant marine has been very satisfying if one considers all the difficulties that have been faced since the United States at the close of the World War decided to back private shipping concerns.

Today one can go down to the sea with a ticket issued by a United States steamship company and travel to any part of the world. The stars and stripes float from the mastheads in all seas and ports.

But there is still a fly in the ointment. The people of the United States are not ship-conscious—as are Europeans—and they do not go out of their way to patronize United States ships. Imagine an Englishman traveling on a foreign ship. Frenchmen and Germans are as partisan to their ships as they are to their wine and beer.

If Americans would refuse to travel on any ships unless they are American owned and operated our Nation would become a magnificient power in world commerce.

A CHANGING EXPERIMENT

It is interesting for even the most casual student of affairs, to watch the transitions from one move to another, which have followed so rapidly since March 4th.

Despite the fact the then President-elect Roosevelt promised this country would stay on a sound money basis, many people feared inflation and began converting their funds into gold last winter. The first official act of the newly inaugurated President was to close all the banks for that memorable bank holiday, yet the public hoped for the best and hardly a murmur went up from the nation. Congress immediately began giving the President more far-reaching powers than any peace-time executive ever had enjoyed, and still the people without reference to political affiliations, gave unstinted support to every measure Mr. Roosevelt requested. Then the NRA was launched, and in spite of the assumption of dictatorship of government over business, business for the most part did not greatly murmur.

On top of the NRA program came the gold buying stunt, pulling the price of the paper dollar rapidly down. And now for the first time since last March big men of the country are starting to openly protest the Administration's action. They see nothing ahead, except the rocks of disastrous inflation, with floods of greenbacks, uncertain in value, taking the place of our money which has been sound for half a century.

This is the newest transition period. People have accepted the experimental measures cheerfully, one by one as they came along. Now it looks as if the era of good feeling towards this administration was gradually passing. Many prominent men are finally saying the President had better get back into some charted roads, away from the experiment of inflation which has ruined every country where it has been tried.

Will Mr. Roosevelt heed some of these danger signals, or will he continue to try out on the country all the experiments his college professor advisors advocate?

"STRAIGHT GASOLINE SOLD HERE"

Last summer the French Chamber of Deputies passed a law making mandatory the blending of 12 per cent alcohol made from beets with all gasoline used as motor fuel. The legislation is similar to that being proposed by corn, wheat and other interests in this country. The French Chamber wanted to provide a motor fuel cheaper than imported gasoline and to eliminate the surplus beet crop. American legislators want to eliminate surplus farm crops by making them into alcohol, but admit the blended fuel will be more expensive.

Reports from France indicate that blended fuels have been something less than popular. Alcohol stocks are increasing enormously. Motoring associations are protesting. Individual motorists complain that the alcohol eats into piping, causes frequent motor stalling, ruins paintwork, and generally accelerates depreciation.

This also has come to pass. Gasoline service stations are posting signs reading "Straight Gasoline Sold Here." And such stations are getting the business.

The experience of French motorists with blended fuel is about the same as that of other nations. Motorists do not want these fuels, they do not like them, and they avoid using them whenever possible. There is nothing whatever to show that American motorists would have a different attitude. Chances are that the higher costs alone would discourage widespread use.

Legislators promoting the blended fuel idea undoubtedly appreciate that fact. Consequently they plan to increase taxes on straight gasoline so as to "equalize" costs. Maybe American motorists will not think so well of that idea, either.

BACK TO THE FARM

National interest has been aroused in a suggestion made a short time ago by Editor Walter P. McGuire of the Southside Virginia News, Petersburg, Virginia; the suggestion being that farm boys keep on the farm.

It's a simple suggestion, an old and a very sound one. How much unemployment has been caused by the trek from farm to city is problematical—but it would make an impressive total. These young men, for the most part, are untrained and inexperienced and unfitted for factory work. They rarely find jobs above the common labor level. They are the first to be dismissed when times get hard—and the last to be taken back when recovery starts.

They know farming — and the farm is where they belong, for their own good and for that of the nation. It is on the farm that they have their chance to prosper and live happy and useful lives. It's time the trend was reversed—with the farm-boys-turned-city-boys going home again.

the price "pegged." The farmers' price for milk is beginning to slip and Chairman Baldwin stated: "We have found we cannot have price control without production control." His words came just a few days short of the nine months period, but could not be construed as covering national affairs.

National Prohibition ended Tuesday at two o'clock, as the state of Utah officially ratified repeal. New York police were warned by the state administrator to rigidly enforce the new control measures. Former Political Allies Not So Friendly Under the Surface

Albany, Dec. 5 — The visit which former Governor Smith recently made to President Roosevelt in Washington recalled to the politically minded in Albany (and that includes nearly everybody) the visit which Mr. Smith didn't make to Mr. Roosevelt in the early part of 1932, just after the latter had announced he was a candidate for the Democratic nomination for President. At the time there were many rumors of a rift between the two. The then Governor took notice of these rumors, which he declared to be baseless, and informed the newspaper men that he proposed to set them at rest. Mr. Smith was shortly going to be entertained at the Executive Mansion, and, as announced through the press, "nothing will be left undone during Mr. Smith's forthcoming stay in Albany to show that he is still on friendly terms with Mr. Roosevelt."

This One Was Never Made

It was generally understood that Mr. Smith had then planned to come to Albany, and probably would have called at the Mansion. To him and his friends it seemed obvious that Mr. Roosevelt proposed to use the visit to give the appearance that he had been "taken into camp"—and so the trip was not made. Instead, Mr. Smith asked his daughter and her household to go to New York, and the family meeting originally scheduled to be held in this city was transferred to the metropolis.

The Washington Tea Party

The Smith coterie here, which is still very large, sees something like the same motive back of the recent invitation to Mr. Smith to have tea at the White House—an invitation which could not well be dodged, since such a bid amounts practically to a command, and no good excuse was handy. Persons present say that while "Al" was the life of that party and entertained his friends among the guests in his old-time manner, there was no chance for any private conversation between the President and himself, and probably none was intended. Yet, timed as it was with the appointment of one Mr. Hoey, a close friend of Mr. Smith, to an important Federal office in New York City, and widely broadcast, it gave the impression that the two former Governors had got their heads together, restored the friendship of former days, and were henceforth to be Damon and Pythias to each other. This interpretation of the incident irked the Happy Warrior no little. It may have had something to do with Al's breaking out some days later with the open letter concerning "baloney" dollars and certain "crackpots" accused of trying to wreck the Democratic party.

New Hope For Rural Roads

Some fruit may yet be borne by the Lord-Deyo resolution passed at the first special session of the Legislature, which requested $10,000,000 of Federal funds for the construction of farm-to-market highways in this state. It will be recalled that Secretary of the Interior Ickes refused to allow the money, though it would have provided more employment per dollar spent than probably any other enterprise in which the government could invest. Albany officials were then asked by Senator Lord and Assemblyman Deyo to set aside the amount from the State's $40,000,000 share of the $400,000,000 allotment for civil works made by Federal authorities.

Fund is Badly Mutilated

It was felt it was not too much to ask that a quarter of the entire allotment be devoted to such an enterprise, especially since it would give a double benefit in furnishing employment and also in providing good roads too long delayed through the vetoes of respective Governors. However, it appears that the authorities who are handling the matter have asked for only $5,000,000 from this fund, and if it is received will allot half of that to country roads, using the balance for construction of main thoroughfares, although earlier in the summer a grant of $22,000,000 in Federal funds was received for the latter purpose. With the $10,000,000 asked in the Lord-Deyo resolution a program for farm-to-market roads could have been carried well toward completion. But even a quarter of a loaf is better than no bread.

A Valuable By-Product

A by-product of the New York Mayoralty election which seems to be giving Republican politicians a good deal of comfort is the assurance of cleaner work at the polls there in the future. Estimates made by the Honest Ballot Association and other interested bodies is that in recent years illegal practices have accounted for from 200,000 to 300,000 votes in that city when there is any kind of a hot contest. Practically all of this has been the work of Tammany. In view of the blow received last month, that organization will certainly be less bold in attempting election frauds, and with a strong police force in able hands to back up the work of the citizens, the repeater, the floater, the impersonator and others who have helped roll up fictitious figures are liable to find their occupation pretty well shot.

More Lawyers in Assembly

Lawyers continue to increase their lead in the Assembly, results of last month's election showing 72 members chosen from that profession, divided evenly between the Republican and Democratic parties, 36 each. The only woman in the new Legislature is a lawyer, Miss Doris I. Byrne, a Bronx Democrat. Last year there were 70 lawyers. The Senate did have 21 lawyers among its 51 members, but one of them, Senator Shackno of the Bronx, was chosen to a judgeship, and unless another member of the bar is chosen to succeed him the fraternity will lose one representative, but will still be far in the lead of any other occupation.

GOSPER --- KELLY

ABOUT CHRISTMAS SLIPPERS

Probably our store brings more real comfort into the world at Christmas time than any other store in the city.

Every year we sell from five to six thousand pairs of gift slippers, for various members of the family.

Slippers are so easy on Dad's corns; they give Mother so much comfort after her hard day's work; they are so intriguing with Sister's negligee; and they make so much less noise on the clattering feet of the romping children.

Sometimes we wonder why we don't sell twice as many pairs, especially when the prices are so low.

Just visit our complete Slipper Department on Balcony Floor. It will help solve your gift problem.

Governor Issues Seal Sale Call

Albany, Dec. 4—Governor Lehman designated the month of December as the period for the annual sale of Christmas Seals as a practical and effective means of participating in the fight against tuberculosis. The proclamation reads as follows:

"Christmas Seals are being placed on sale in New York State and throughout the Nation today. The proceeds are to enable local, state and national tuberculosis associations to cooperate effectively with official health authorities in the warfare against tuberculosis.

"When the seals were first sold in 1907 this disease was the most important cause of death. Last year the tuberculosis death rate was 58 per cent under that of 1907 and a further decrease is indicated in 1933. This reduction represents an annual saving of over 9,000 lives of men, women and children in New York State. That these thousands of people, our neighbors, relatives and friends, who would have perished after long periods of distressing and disabling illness, if the tuberculosis death rate of 1907 had prevailed in 1932, are alive today should bring added Christmas cheer to all of us.

"Christmas Seals have helped to secure this remarkable result.

"But much remains to be done. The conditions of poverty which now prevail in hundreds of thousands of families in the state—overcrowded living quarters, limited food, clothing and fuel — have reduced physical resistance to disease. Recent studies show that sickness among the unemployed increased rapidly last year.

"The tuberculosis association in New York State help to secure sanatoria, clinics, and public health nurses. They assist in discovering tuberculosis among children. They assist in teaching health in schools; they supply advisory service to unemployed families and to social and health workers on how to provide proper food on a minimum budget. They spread public information on the prevention and treatment of tuberculosis. Those and other vital activities of the tuberculosis association can be coutinued only by a successful Christmas Seal Sale this holiday season.

"THEREFORE, I Herbert H. Lehman, Governor of the State of New York, do hereby proclaim the month of December as the period for the Annual Christmas Seal Sale, and commend the purchase and use of the seals as a practical and effective means of participation by the public in general in this all-important movement for protecting the lives and promoting the health of the people of our Commonwealth."

The Addison Girl Scouts are sponsoring the Seal Sale in Addison.

Why Wait TILL NEXT SUMMER TO BUY your ELECTRIC REFRIGERATOR

It's just the GIFT for the Family Christmas

Here's one gift that will be just as bright and new next Christmas as it is this. For many a year after you'll be reminded of the Christmas morning that started a new era of carefree refrigeration in your home.

This is the year of all years to present your family with that Electric Refrigerator. Prices are low. Terms are convenient, and you need its certainty and safety all the year round. Weather records show that with makeshift methods of refrigeration you can be sure of only 19 days of refrigeration weather a year.

With an Electric Refrigerator you can be absolutely certain of refrigeration weather (33° to 50°) all year round. Let us show you how many families are paying for their electric refrigerator with the money it saves. ASK US OR SEE YOUR ELECTRIC REFRIGERATOR DEALER.

FLOOR Mats
Stop those cold drafts around the floor boards of your car. A new floor mat is just what you need to insure health protection and riding comfort during the winter days ahead.
Remember many of those tantalizing colds have their origin in faulty protection from winds and drafts. Check up on the floor mats in your car. If they are worn, if they permit drafts to enter they should be replaced.

ANDOVER—At a recent meeting of the Alleghany County board of supervisors the total appropriations needed to carry on the county's business to September 30, 1934, was set at $339,992.90. This is a reduction of $11,086.68 from the budget of one year ago and about $100,000 from the budget of two years ago. Savings of nearly $53,000 were made in the net amount required for the poor fund and a bit over $27,000 for highways. But these advantages were lost in the general funds which calls for over $69,000 more than it did a year ago. This is largely accounted for by a balance of $36,022.97 due on the deficiency appropriation necessary last year, $20,850 due to the temporary loans and interest of $8,835 for interest on these temporary obligations. It is the first time in many years that it has been necessary to raise money for interest on temporary borrowings.

New Hybrid Wheats Have Great Value

Empire State Needs Variety Resistant to Smut and Hessian Fly.

The story of the development of Marquis wheat is one of the most fascinating in the annals of plant breeding, says F. P. Bussell of the New York state college of agriculture.

Back in the 1890's, the settlers on the plains of western Canada were trying to grow wheat, but about two years out of five their crops were ruined by early fall frosts. The outlook was anything but encouraging.

About 1892, Dr. A. P. Saunders of the experimental farm at Agassiz made a cross between hard Red Calcutta wheat and Red Fife. By 1903 several pure strains resulting from this cross were tested, and by 1907 propagation of these in the Canadian wheat belt began. The success of the new wheat, he says, was phenomenal. The new strain yielded well, ripened ahead of frosts, and was of exceptionally high milling quality. The success of western Canada as a wheat growing land seemed assured.

Professor Bussell says that the purpose of cross breeding is to develop strains of wheat which are resistant to climatic conditions and to the many fungus diseases and insect pests which menace the crop.

Here in New York state, he points out, a white wheat is needed which is equal in yield and milling quality to Honor or Junior Number 6 and which is resistant to loose smut and Hessian fly. Offhand it might seem easy to produce such a wheat, but as a matter of fact, he adds, it is extremely difficult.

STORING ICE

In packing ice in a farm ice house place the cakes close together to make the mass as tight and solid as possible to eliminate cracks and openings through which air circulates says the United States Department of Agriculture. When cakes are irregular in size, fill the openings between cakes with small pieces of ice. Broken ice on top of the cakes or projecting pieces along the sides should be removed.

With sawdust or mill shavings for insulation, leave at least a 12-inch space between the sides of the ice stack and the walls of the building and fill with dry sawdust or shavings as the packing in the center of the room proceeds. Also place a layer of dry sawdust about a foot thick on the bottom of the house except in the middle, where the layer should be a few inches thinner so that the cakes will have a tendency to slide toward the center. For good drainage, the floor of the house is usually sloped so that water from melted ice runs to the center and into a trench filled with gravel or small stones or into a drain tile which carries the water away. If drain tile is used, it should be trapped to prevent entrance of warm air.

FROZEN DESSERTS

Here is another of the delicious frozen desserts recommended by the Consumers Information Service of the New York State Department of Agriculture and Markets:

MAPLE NUT CREAM

3 cups cream
1 cup sugar
1/2 heaping teaspoon gelatin
1 cup milk
1 cup maple syrup
1 cup finely chopped nuts
Pinch of salt

Soak gelatin in cold milk for 10 minutes, then heat over boiling water until it is dissolved. Mix with cream, sugar and syrup. Add the nuts after the mixture has been frozen to mush.

This is one of a series of frozen dessert recipes prepared for this paper by the Consumers Information Service. Watch for others.

Mulch for Strawberries

Strawberry beds should be protected with a mulch during the winter, says G. W. Peck of the New York state college of agriculture.

Clean wheat, rye, or oat straw makes the best mulch, he says, but buckwheat straw, leaves, cornstalks or even evergreen boughs, may be used. The mulch should be applied as soon as the ground freezes.

If straw or leaves are used, the mulch should be about three inches deep. Two or three layers of evergreen boughs or cornstalks are required.

Professor Peck says that the alternate freezing and thawing of winter weather tends to heave the strawberry plants out of the ground and expose the roots. Later, he points out, the roots freeze or dry out. A good mulch will protect the plants from this injury.

In the spring, he adds, the mulch can be left on the plants for a short time to keep them from starting early enough to have blossoms killed by late spring frosts. When the mulch is moved in the spring, it should be placed between the berry rows to hold moisture in the soil and to keep weed growth down. A thin layer of the straw should be left around the plants to protect the berries from sand and dirt.

Edwin Elwell Critically Ill In a Hospital At Hornell

TROUPSBURG — Edwin Elwell, son of Mr. and Mrs. George B. Elwell, was taken to the St. James Hospital at Hornell for an operation for appendicitis. Winter Activities of Farm Bureau Outlined

The winter program of the farm bureau will begin with a series of meetings December 12 to 15 for the consideration of pasture and feed crop problems.

Steuben County has a vast expanse of pasture lands, 366 square miles, which is one-third of the total land area of the county. The preservation of these grazing lands in a productive condition is a matter of vital importance to the dairy industry.

The production of legume hay and the use of superphosphate and similar subjects will be considered at each of these meetings at which Prof. H. B. Hartwig of the College of Agriculture will speak. The date and place of each meeting will be announced within a few days.

TELL ME AN INDIAN STORY

Dr. E. A. Bates Cornell
(Copyright, 1932)

Grandfather's Oak

The hunters' moon shone on the snow-draped pines that stood sentinel, guarding the Indian village in the valley.

From a hole in the center of each bark lodge a puff of gray smoke arose; the evening meal had been eaten and the great night-log rolled on the fire.

Old grandfather was watching the boys pull toward the fire a great log of oak; its peculiar gnarled knots brought a question to his lips, for the old log seemed familiar to him.

The boys told him that a strong wind on the night before had thrown the giant oak that stood on the trail beyond the village, and a mist came into the eyes of the old man.

The boys stopped their labors and the old man told them: "Long moons ago, when I was a mere lad I planted an acorn, with my stone knife beside the trail. My older brother and I often played oround that tree when we were young; and your grondmother first told me she loved me when we stood under that tree.

"Larger and larger grew the tree and, because it bothered trail walkers at night, the council ordered the trail-blazer to cut the oak down. But my brother was a trail-blazer, and memory stopped his hand. So he cut a nearby oak and changed the trail to a new path and thus saved this oak.

"Now the north wind becomes the trail blazer and to our fire comes the oak. That tree has a soul; in its heart are memories of my boyhood, my courtship and my life."

Tears filled the old man's eyes as the boys pulled the log away from the fire. Long moons after Grandfather had gone to join his fathers, the old oak long remained a sacred love-seat in that cabin.

Chickens Need Vitamin G Feed

Green Leaves and Milk Products Must Be Fed to Get Eggs That Will Hatch

Vitamin G, one of the more recently discovered vitamins, is of great importance in poultry rations, says A. T. Ringrose of the New York state college of agriculture.

Experiments which are being conducted at the college of agriculture show that the presence of this vitamin in the ration of the young chick reduces losses by death, and promotes growth; in the ration of the laying hen, it aids in the production of eggs that will hatch.

Mr. Ringrose said that in experiments with laying hens or rations low in vitamin G, few eggs hatch, or less than ten per cent of the fertile eggs. Eggs from hens that are fed enough vitamin G hatch seventy per cent or more.

Green, leafy alfalfa; milk and milk products are the most practical sources of the vitamin, he says. Dried skimmilk and buttermilk are of equal value, and dried whey, or milk-sugar feed, is one and a half times richer in the vitamin than dried skimmilk. However, he points out that alfalfa is only one-half as rich in vitamin G as is milk and that it is fibrous and slightly unpalatable, and for these reasons should not be used for the only vitamin G. supplement.

For production of hatchable eggs Mr. Ringrose says that ten per cent of dried skimmilk in the breeder mash will supply enough vitamin G. When alfalfa is added, the quantity of milk may be reduced. The same proportion of dried skimmilk in the feed mixture, he says, will supply the needed vitamin G for growing chicks.

SPORTSMEN HAVE INTEREST IN FOREST FIRE PREVENTION

"A torrential rain on the Challis National Forest over an area burned in 1931 resulted in a heavy deposit of sand and debris in tributaries of the Loon Creel sufficient to destroy all possibility of fishing in the stream for a number of years" runs a report from a United States Forester.

This is a good example of one of the destructive effects of a forest fire on fish life. Also in every forest fire there is usually a large destruction of game and bird life either through the burning of their feeding and nesting places or direct killing. This year many of the streams in New York State were not stocked with trout because the streams had dried up or were too shallow to support fish life. The majority of such dry streams in times of drought lack water because of the destruction of the forest cover and particularly the forest floor of soft, porous, water-holding humus.

This is of interest to sportsmen says the New York State College of Forestry at Syracuse, N. Y. A cigarette smoking sportsman does not always connect the fact that if he sets fire in the forest by carelessly throwing away his lighted cigarette he is destroying fishing and hunting in proportion to the size of the fire and wild life conditions on the effected area. It has been found that one hundred times more water, during a period of rainfall, may flow from a burned area than from an unburned area. Naturally drought follows such a fast runoff of rainfall. Other records show water runoff of 747 cubic feet from burned areas as against only four cubic feet from natural wooded cover which tends to store the water and regulate its flow.

These conditions, and many more throughout the country, illustrate the need of extraordinary care in putting out cigarettes, cigars, pipe tobacco, matches and campfires before they are abandoned. Forest fire prevention means better hunting and better fishing.

Tilt Eggs in Incubator; Hatch More Live Chicks

About half of the losses from fertil eggs that fail to hatch during the incubation periad are due to abnormal positions of the chicks in the shell and are preventable, according to Dr. T. C. Byerly, of the Bureau of Animal Industry, United States Department of Agriculture. The normal position of the chick before hatching is with the head near the air sac at the large end of the egg. The chick breathes the air in the sac before it pips the shell, but in case of an abnormal position the chick may die from suffocation.

The principal cause of abnormal positions of chicks in the shell is belived to be improper tilting of the eggs in the tray from the fifth to the fifteenth days of incubation. Eggs incubated with the small end up show the highest percentage of abnormal chicks, and the Department therefore recommends the eggs should never be allowed to stand in this position. Eggs in many comercial incubators are tilted at a 45° angle, with the large end up, which is believed to give fewer abnormal positions among the chicks than incubating them horizontally.

Dr. Byerly's experiments indicate that losses from abnormal positions of chicks in the shell may be reduced, though not entirely eliminated. An incubator tray was revised that maintains a position between the horizontal and 45° angle. The eggs turned mechanically every 15 minutes and rotated on their long axis in an arc of 60° to 120° but were never rolled over. Eggs in a similar experiment that were turned always in the same direction every 15 minutes showed a very heavy loss.

Although the position of the eggs during incubation has much to do with losses from dead chicks, the poultryman has other factors within his control that may help to reduce these losses, the Department points out. Increased hatching results from careful attention to the diet of the breeding stock and from the selection of breeders for inherited hatchability. Milk products are considered the best sources of protein concentrates for a flock of breeders, although a mixture of milk, meat scrap, and vacuum-dried white fish products also give good results.

Potato Crop Shows Much Improvement

Recent Developments in New York Change Earlier Predictions For State

The 1933 crop of late potatoes in the United States is now estimated to be 317,600,000 bushels, a decrease of only eleven per cent compared with last year's yield.

The New York state crop, which improved more than two million bushels during October, is exceeded only by the Maine crop, according to the October estimate of the United States department of agriculture. However, the estimated 1933 crop of 24,231,000 bushels is still fifteen per cent less than the 1932 crop.

Maine now reports a four-percent increase, compared with last year. Pennsylvania's crop is reported to be about the same as last year. The combined crop of Michigan and Wisconsin is estimated to be twenty-seven per cent less than the 1932 crop.

Up to November 4, the carlot movement of late potatoes from the eighteen important potato-producing states was 47,800, an increase of 15,265 carloads or 47 per cent compared with carlot movement up to the same date in November, 1932. These increased car-loadings, according to the New York state college of agriculture, are due to the short intermediate crop, which caused late potatoes to move to market earlier than usual. "It is obvious", says the report, "that the supply of potatoes remaining on farms is considerably below that of last year."

Of the crops that compete with potatoes, the sweet potato outlook is for about eight million bushels less than the unusually large crop of 1932; the rice crop is reported to be nine per cent less than last year's; and the wheat crop is about twenty-nine per cent less than the 726,000,000 bushel crop of 1932. The dry bean crop is estimated at 11,600,000 bags, of 100 pounds each, which is one million bags more than last year and about the same as the average crop.

sult in an increased membership in 1934.

Six towns have already exceeded last year's total with Wayland leading with 18 more, Prattsburg 16, Cohocton 14, Campbell 6, Urbana 3, and Troupsburg 1. Walter Babcock of Prattsburg was high score man and reported in 29 members. Lee Edmond, Cohocton, reported 27, Earl Coye, 24, and F. W. Mehlenbacher 18.

President Speaks

All farmers and every rural community benefit by farm bureau activities, stated C. R. White, president of the New York State Farm Bureau Federation, in his address to the annual convention. "The work this organization did to bring about the allocation of the gas tax money on the basis of road mileage, to shift the cost of state road bridges from town and county to state, for the state to pay its fair share of the cost of snow removal and the defeat of the surtax on truck license fees are typical examples. In every one of these activities the farm bureau accumulated a vast amount of information and facts and carried on an aggressive campaign in behalf of these measures".

In commenting on the monetary program of the present administration, Mr. White stated that the farm bureau has recommended this project since 1929. He expressed every confidence that it would be a success and stated that it was the only salvation because it made possible the payment of debts. "Some advocate the expansion of credit as a means of reviving business. There is no shortage of credit in this country at this time and more than that business can not be pulled out of the hole by credit. If business recovery could be accomplished by credit expansion," Mr. White stated, "It would have been accomplished during the Hoover administration, when credit was greatly extended for the purpose of reviving business. For the first time in the history of the work monetary reform is being accomplished on the basis of accurate and intelligent information and a sound program of facts."

How What and Why?

This paper has arranged with the Office of Information of the New York State colleges of agriculture and home economics to answer questions about problems of farm and home. If you enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope, and mention the name of this paper, you will receive a direct reply to your query from the colleges. Do not ask more than one question in one letter or on one post card. Ask as many questions as you like, but make each one a separate communication.

Apple Identity

Miss N. H., Lacona, writes: "Among our apples is one which we call 'Pumpkin Sweet'. This is a fall apple, keeping a very short time, bright red in color, pointed rather than round in shape, unusually juicy and very sweet. The flesh is somewhat yellow. Do you think Pumpkin Sweet is the correct name for it?"

S. R. Levering of the department of pomology replies: "The apple is probably not the Pumpkin Sweet variety. The true Pumpkin Sweet, also known as Pound Sweet, is a large greenish yellow, sweet apple. Your apple, you say is red. There are a number of sweet apples which are red and meet your description moderately well. Among these are Hendrick Sweet, Bailey Sweet and Victoria Sweet.

"If your apple is pointed as you say, it might well be Hendrick Sweet, except that Hendrick Sweet keeps longer than you seem to indicate. I could not identify this sweet apple with certainty without seeing it—perhaps not even then, since there are many odd varieties of sweet apples."

Moldy Silage

O. B., Clockville, writes: "A blue mold forms on the ensilage in my eighteen-foot silo. I have had the silage three years, and I can not feed it very fast as I have only twenty-five cows. Will you please advise me what to do about the mold? It is making my cattle sick."

Professor E. S. Savage of the animal husbandry department answers: "I have had experience with this type of mold. The only thing that we have ever done is to clean it out and throw it away. So far as my experience goes, I would think that one of the causes of the mold is that you do not feed your silage fast enough. Your silo is rather large in diameter. We do not usually advise a silo more than sixteen feet in diameter".

Professor J. K. Wilson of the department of soil bacteriology adds: "These mold troubles would not happen if the silage were removed more rapidly. My suggestion is that you cover the surface of the silage to keep out the air. Heavy burlap, boards or possibly straw might be used. The covering would keep out the air and might prevent the growth of the mold. However, this is only a suggestion. Any plan which reduces the amount of air which comes in contact with the surface of the silage will help in controlling the mold.

As a winter substitute for pasture, feed brood sows alfalfa or other legume hay. The hay should make up 10 to 15 per cent of the total feed.

Hot School Lunch of Milk, Cocoa, Cream Soup, Called Health Aid

Many Schools Throughout The State Already Have School Lunch System—Others Should Follow

By CHARLES H. BALDWIN
Commissioner, Department of Agriculture and Markets Albany, New York

THREE substantial meals a day which growing children must have is difficult of accomplishment if the child is dependent on a school box lunch for his noon meal.

Digestion is facilitated by warm food and liquid food, but — the food in a lunch box is cold and concentrated. Digestion is favored by pleasant social intercourse, but —eating a box lunch is a solitary process. Even the teacher, after her morning's work, finds little in her lunch box that stimulates appetite and induces relaxation. A mid-day meal of cold food five times a week throughout the school year is not conducive to good digestion or good health in either teacher or child.

The remedy for this condition is the "hot school lunch," which provides not only food that is hot and therefore appetizing, but also food that possesses high nutritive value. The hot lunch gives an opportunity to provide boys and girls with foods made from milk, vegetables and fruits that are high in minerals, proteins and vitamins, and are necessary and valuable in growth and health-promoting qualities.

The country child, who walks a long distance to and from school, and after school helps with the farm and home chores, especially has a very high food requirement. The box lunch is inadequate for such requirements; the hot school lunch is necessary.

According to Miss Mary McCormick, State Supervisor of Health Teaching, a substantial number of the schools of the State are now serving hot lunches. The rest should follow this lead rapidly.

Hot school lunches offer a way of educating the parents as well as the children in selecting foods suitable for lunches. In fact, the carrying over of nutrition and health information to the family is perhaps the most important effect of the hot school lunch program.

Foods selected for the hot school lunch should be simple, so that they may be prepared in a short time with limited equipment. Milk is an absolute necessity, and should be the foundation of every lunch. Since a minimum of four cups of milk daily is considered the ideal quantity for children, it is always essential to provide at least one cup of milk for each child at the noon meal. Vegetables and fruits also occupy a prominent place among the nutritious and health promoting foods. Frequently among the foods used are a combination of milk and vegetables, such as creamed vegetables, cream vegetable soup, cocoa made with milk, scrambled eggs, or Spanish rice.

A postcard to Consumers Information Service, State Department of Agriculture and Markets, Albany, N. Y., will bring a valuable pamphlet on "Hot School Lunches as a Health Activity," written by Miss Mary G. McCormick, State Supervisor of Health Teaching.
